For more than 20 years, comedian Bill Maher has pushed the boundaries of where funny, political talk can go on American television, and now this Emmy® Award-winning comedian will return to Philadelphia's Academy of Music on Friday, September 9 at 8 p.m., for the first time since 2014. This performance is presented by the Kimmel Center for the Performing Arts in association with Larry Magid Entertainment.

"Rarely do we see an artist with such a keen ability to take a dividing topic like politics, use it to bring a smile to audience's faces and draw people together," said Anne Ewers, President & CEO of the Kimmel Center for the Performing Arts. "Bill Maher's performances are the perfect combination of entertainment and education, a balance for which we continually strive at the Kimmel Center."

First on "Politically Incorrect" (Comedy Central, ABC 1993-2002) and for the last thirteen years on HBO's "Real Time," Maher's combination of unflinching honesty and big laughs have garnered him 24 Emmy® nominations. In October of 2008,

Neumann University Director to Speak at Vatican Symposium

Lee DelleMonache has been selected to speak on "Sport Land Mercy" at the XIII International Symposium of University Professors: Knowledge and Mercy, scheduled for September 7-11 at the Vatican. DelleMonache, director of the Neumann University Institute for Sport, Spirituality and Character Development, is the sole representative from the United States who will speak in the "Sport and Mercy" track of the symposium.

She was invited to speak by the Vatican Congregation for Catholic Education. Her topic is "Sport, spirituality and character development: experiencing mercy through a unique sport ministry."

In the abstract of her presentation, DelleMonache writes: "Athletics has the potential to lead to a deeper understanding of the need for mercy in our lives. It offers a transformative lens through which to explore life's most significant questions: Who am I? What is my place in this world? Research documents that this quest for discovery during the college years reveals college students' hunger for spiritual nourishment. Educators, therefore, have a sacred responsibility to guide these young people on their journey of spiritual discovery. Informed by the Catholic Franciscan tradition, the Neumann University Institute for Sport, Spirituality and Character Development provides opportunities to experience spiritual works of mercy through its unique ministry to student-athletes and coaches."

Explaining the approach used at the Institute, she continues: "Team chaplain lay ministry, commissioning rituals, team reflections, and online resources are designed to deepen awareness of self, others and God and help student-athletes and coaches learn to recognize God's endless offer of mercy in their lives."

Professors from Italy, the United Kingdom and Kenya will join DelleMonache in addressing various aspects of the relationship between sport and mercy.

DelleMonache has been director of the Institute since 2013. From 2005-2013, she served as the Institute's coordinator for management and planning, and as the ISSCD liaison with numerous external organizations, such as the Association of Catholic Colleges and Universities, the National Catholic Education Association, Catholic Athletes for Christ, and Beyond Sport International. She holds a B.A. in English and communications from Cabrini College, an M.S. in sport management from Neumann University, and is currently writing her dissertation for the organizational leadership Ph.D. program at
